The quiet, expectant mood of the empty halls is broken as the doors are eagerly opened. Laughter, buzzing conversations and hurried footsteps fill the air until the ringing bells signify the beginning of class and the beginning of a new school year—a year of new faces.

People, however, are the lifeblood of Highland High School, their ambitions, accomplishments, and goals. Behind each of those faces lies that certain something, the spark and vitality of youth and the promise they possess for the desired future.

Joyously celebrating an athletic victory, working far into the night on a term paper, or waiting with shining eyes of expectancy are Highland High School's NEW FACES—THE PROMISE OF YOUTH.

Highland High

Looking out on to a glass-enclosed court from the windows of a spacious library, students caught a feeling of the outdoors throughout the year. Bright, modern hallways and classrooms gave Highland High School a fresh, casual atmosphere.

Besides serving their practical purpose as being a short-cut through crowded halls, both courts provide a place for students to sit and talk during breaks and lunch hours in good weather. The Senior Court, with its white, wrought iron furniture, and the school court, with its low wooden benches are the scenes of informal gatherings.

All classrooms have wide, low windows looking out on to either campus or courts. From the cafeteria, students can view the football field and track. The cafeteria is equipped with two self-service lines and is the scene of plays and pageants during the year because of its stage and seating capacity.

Silhouetted against the sky, Highland High offers broad expanses of modern and spacious classrooms and hallways in the new wing. This wing, completed in the fall of 1965, houses the business education department, with classes in typing, shorthand, and salesmanship.

provides modern facilities in well-equipped classrooms

Furnished with wrought iron chairs and benches, the Senior Court gives students a place to relax and converse in good weather. It also provides a scenic view for many classrooms and the library.

Clean, straight lines add to the modern architecture of Highland High. Spacious grounds provide space to grow as a new gym is planned to enlarge the present one in the future.

Tall stone pillars are attractive as well as useful, as are the bright skylights, wide windows and shrubbery at the main entrance of Highland High School.

Business education department adds

Distributive education or at least its beginnings have come to Highland High School. With their recent move into a new, more spacious and modern wing, the business education department added one more class to its already diverse curriculum. Salesmanship was an innovation this year as a class in practical learning and application.

Future executives learned the complexities of running a corporation and studied for their future roles and occupations as community leaders with applied economics and clerical practice classes. Business law also offered to those who wished to gain insight into the technical phase of the business world.

Secretarial training or background for students wishing to take faster notes was given in shorthand and notehand classes. Typing was also one of the electives offered by the department.

Bookkeeping and the processes of office machines were taught to be vital parts in the efficient running of a business office. By diligently working with the machines and methods of modern bookkeeping, students of today prepare to be the business leaders of tomorrow.

Linda Ross, business machines student, uses an adding machine to do lengthy calculation. Since their recent move into the new wing, the business education department offers more spacious and well-equipped classrooms.

Checking and grading are a teacher's routine.

salesmanship class to curriculum

Vickie Heimberger carefully corrects a slight typing error as she swiftly completes another business letter. Nimble fingers, accuracy, speed, and continual concentration are prime requisites for all proficient typing students.

Rechecking long columns of figures soon becomes routine to students taking courses in business machines. Senior Lanette Phillips painstakingly goes over her class work in an attempt to achieve accuracy which is of prime importance in today's business world.

Symbolic of the work done daily by business students, the number-filled tapes of an adding machine tumble upon the floor as the students complete their homework assignments.

Boys learn new skills through industrial arts classes

Skills in handicrafts are the tools of the industrial arts department. After their recent expansion into the new wing, the department gave a more spacious and well-equipped working area to its students.

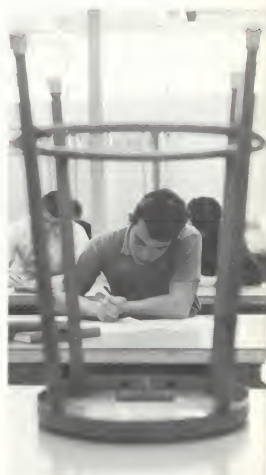

Precision and neatness are all-important in mechanical and architectural drawing classes. Designing and laying out intricate machine parts are part of mechanical drawing classes, while architectural drawing students sketch and build scale models of their ideal houses.

Studying the properties of wood and metal shop, students make furniture and metal projects. Enlarging the department was the new electronics class, enabling students to study more extensive and varied phases of industrial arts.

Safety precautions are taught to be important features when working with heavy machines. Protective eye shields must be worn during grinding, sawing and cutting. Heavy asbestos gloves must also be worn when using the blow torch to avoid burns.

Roger Slisby fires a cutting torch to smooth away rough edges of a piece of metal. Welding, cutting and grinding are all techniques employed in making useful metal tools that are not only attractive but safe to use.

Industrial electronics student Bill Kozel tediously studies a complex maze of wiring as he completes an assignment.

Getting ready to saw a piece of wood, Junior Milton LaMantia lines up the saw to insure a clean cut. Modern machinery enables students a maximum of efficiency.

With precision accuracy, a wood shop student checks to make sure his book shelf is perfectly squared.

Employing the techniques of modern machine shop practice, an industrial arts student in metal shop grinds a piece of metal down to specified size. Safety precautions are always taken as he has a double shield for his protection.

Power mechanics and computer programming augment curriculum for Highland students

Junior Larry Mays and Mr. Rush, power mechanics teacher, discuss the torque of a late car model.

Power mechanics students dismantle a tractor engine to study its functions and the purposes of each part.

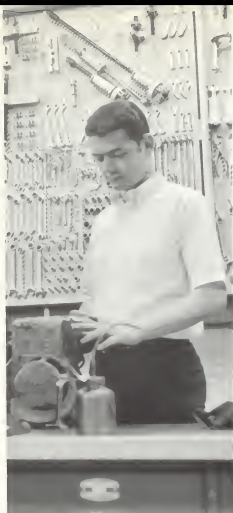

Adding to Highland High School's growing academic department, power mechanics and computer programming classes were the newest additions to the curriculum.

While exploring the many intricate parts of the engine, power mechanics students work with deft hands to reassemble a machine to its natural state. Under the skilled leadership of a qualified instructor, these students gained a vast knowledge of the motor.

A maze of tapes and an unceasing hum of computers—this typifies the latest innovation in Highland's math department. Data processing and programming techniques are prime factors in the new computer programming classes.

Modern equipment is the key to the program. A classroom teletype is connected with a computer at Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago. This allows students the chance to program computers on the spot while also receiving quick and accurate results.

Terry Goddard studies the working parts of a four-cycle engine against a background of tools and machinery.

David Rowley sends in his problem by classroom teletypes to a master compute and waits for an answer.

Social studies department gives

U.S. History students ponder current questions.

Students in world history classes debate various aspects of the colonization of America.

Testing acquired knowledge is a major part of basic curriculum in social studies classes. To learn the basics of history requires not only diligent study, but intensive research into the past and present world affairs.

significance to present world problems, events

History—the key to the future. In order to better understand current affairs, one must fully understand the past. World and U.S. History tell of not only past events, but their significance on events of today.

Delving into these problems and searching for solutions, students in world and social problems classes find it necessary to trace an event to its very beginnings.

World geography classes “travel” throughout the world, seeing differences in terrain and climate.

To better acquaint students with laws and systems of our country, the social studies department requires seniors to take a course in government and economics. The Constitution, bylaws, and the workings of the stock market are part of the curriculum.

Mr. Charles McGinley, government teacher, ponders a fine point in the executing of the U.S. Constitution.

The effect of geography and terrain are significant on the major events of the history of the United States as Mr. Randy Sheets, history teacher, points out. Geographical barriers and natural resources both helped and hindered the settlement of the West.

Reading, study, and research are the keys to a basic understanding of world and vocational problems as Junior Milton LaMantia studies an extra reading assignment. A basic understanding of past events leads to an understanding of the events of today.

Language study aids, enhances students' comprehension, power to communicate

Foreign language and a keener appreciation of English has become an important part of the curriculum offered at Highland High.

Dialogues, expository talking and prepared speeches are some of the many features in the schedule of a foreign language student. German, Latin, French, and Spanish are each offered as four year electives, allowing students to graduate with a major in foreign language if they choose.

Cuisine and customs are also part of the program as language students take many field trips and converse with exchange students and natives of foreign countries. Three Highland High students spent part of the summer living and attending school in South America, while South American students came to Highland to live, study and learn.

Highland's English classes strive not only to increase vocabulary and grammar skills, but also to acquaint students with the great literary works of our time. Beginning with English and expanding to foreign language study, students become competent to express themselves in many ways.

Latin instructor Miss Alpha Braunwarth reviews declensions of nouns with her first-year Latin class.

Symbolizing Highland's foreign language department, French, German, Latin and Spanish books make a colorful library display.

Foreign exchange student Juan Molina studies quietly in the spacious, well-lit library. Juan comes from Columbia, South America and stayed to live and attend school in Highland for three months, learning the culture and customs of America.

The study of American literature is the theme of junior English classes. Grammar, vocabulary, poetry and novels are studied throughout the year, giving students a basic concept of rules besides giving them a chance to develop their own writing style.

Mrs. Helena Karr, English teacher, discusses a fine point in the structure of a classical poem by Chaucer.

Fine arts promote communication

Know how to bake a cake, play a guitar, or build a model car? These are only some of the topics covered by presentations in speech classes. Students learn the fundamentals of good rhetoric by giving impromptu and prepared speeches.

Fast thinking and quick answers are essential elements to debate students. Opening speeches, cross-examinations, and rebuttals are developed convincingly to sway listeners to the affirmative or negative.

Drama classes study not only interpretive acting, but how to create effective costumes, stage sets, make-up and special effects.

Good reporting, the key to good journalism, is put to use by beginning journalism students as each is given the chance to write for any of the four publications. Top students are chosen for positions, or may take advanced journalism or photography.

Expression is the key in creative dramatics classes as Junior

Eager to learn the fundamentals of printing and its effects on journalism, Dan Clark and Janyce Hope study sizes and styles on a type chart. Headline count is a basic prerequisite for all students who intend to apply for a position on one of the major publications, for headlines must not only fit, but also inform.

Linda Steen strives to transform herself into the role she plays, making it as real as she can.

Learning the rules of good oratory, speech students conduct a panel discussion.

Mr. Richard Johns, journalism advisor, instructs his first-year journalism classes in the basics of page layout. Good layout affords an attractive, well-balanced page as well as well-planned organization and conservation of space.

Students enjoy exercise, team sports

Timing and balance are all-important factors in mastering the side-horse. Gymnastics and tumbling are major class activities.

Flying through the air, Sophomore Rinkje Hoogewerf soars higher and higher as she bounds off the trampoline.

Action was the key word as both educational and physical development were undertaken in physical education classes. Learning through participation, students strove to achieve muscle tone and body coordination through a variety of sports.

Team sports helped to teach good sportsmanship and team work. Baseball and football or soccer were played during good weather. Indoor sports, such as basketball and cageball, were played in the spacious gym.

Strength and agility were perfected in various individual sports. Instruction in tumbling, proper trampoline techniques, and gymnastic activities provided a chance for students to work at their own speeds.

Aiding in tests of endurance, daily calisthenics helped students to increase their stamina and muscular development. Balance and poise were also studied as students learned the basic dance steps.

Jump ball! Participating in a spirited basketball game, boys in physical education classes exhibit interest and enthusiasm.

Future mothers learn new skills

Amidst the intermittent hum of busy sewing machines, deft hands put finishing touches on an original creation. Modern techniques of fashion design and basic sewing skills were only a part of the courses offered by the home economics department.

Fully-equipped kitchens were the laboratories of foods students. Sessions in planning well-balanced, nourishing meals are considered as important as learning to prepare the meals themselves.

How to keep a house running smoothly under good care and supervision was taught in the home management classes.

Preparing for their roles as future wives and mothers, students in the child care and family living classes studied the basics of child psychology. They also learned color schemes and furniture arrangements for the home they will someday own.

Darts, seams, tucks and pleats are all studied by home economics students. Laurel Habzansky puts the finishing touches on a dress, one of the three class projects sewing students undertake each semester.

Mrs. Nancy Johns, home economics teacher, watches her class during a classroom session on child care, psychology, and development.

Senior Pat Farkas rolls out cookie dough in preparation for cooking class. Foods students learn not only how to read recipes and follow them, but how to plan well-rounded, nourishing meals that are appetizing and colorful.

Mr. Joseph Farabee works through a proof of solving triangles by logarithms in trigonometry class.

Hydrogen chloride, potassium permanganate, sodium hydroxide—chemicals and their different reactions are the basis of study for elementary and advanced chemistry classes. Solids, liquids and gasses are studied to learn the basics of molecular composition.

The effect of solutions on electrical currents is the theme of one lab in first-year chemistry class as Ron Goins and Frank Martinez check the wattage of a light bulb. Learning through experimentation is the advantage of chemistry.

Students learn by seeking answers in advanced math, science courses

Microscope slides, dissecting pans, and the smell of formaldehyde were common aspects of elementary and advanced biology classes. Beginning with simple plants and working up to complicated beings, students studied the systems and life patterns of all forms of life.

The mysteries of chemical reactions were probed into by eager chemistry students who became well acquainted with formulas and chemical equations. Labs gave students a chance to seek answers to their questions by performing experiments.

Slide rule in hand, busy physics students computed complicated problems. Thermodynamics, energy, electricity, and the basics of molecular structure were studied to give students an understanding of daily occurrences and allow them to predict what would happen in special circumstances.

Tony Zatkulak tests the basics of physics.

Fundamentals are researched by Juniors Betty Cote and Rich Brosseau as they observe a linear expansion of metal experiment during a lab period.

Students achieve cultural expression

Cultural expression was achieved for students in music and art classes. Skill in creativity and originality, or a potential talent was given a chance to be enhanced.

History of famous painters, sketching techniques, and interpreting modern art are all a part of the curriculum of art appreciation classes. Students learned new skills and were given a chance to express themselves in various media, not only in drawing, but also in sculpture.

Boasting a large music department, Highland High offered a total of four different divisions and seven vocal groups. Students with a talent in musical instruments may receive instruction and belong to the marching and pep bands.

Those with singing talent may take glee club and compete for positions in the H.H.S. choir, or one of the various vocal groups.

Senior Rhonda Wallen skillfully goes about the tedious task of weaving. Arts and crafts students acquired many new talents including the ability to operate a full-size loom. Many of the projects decorated the hall outside the art room.

Mrs. Nally, art instructor, shows beginning art students the correct process of rolling out clay so as to eliminate air bubbles when the ceramic is baked in the kiln. After the first firing, the ceramic is glazed and fired again.

Focusing their undivided attention on Mr. Gordon Wilder, music instructor, choir members strive to catch the down beat of a new musical composition as they diligently practice for a concert. Not only a spring, but a fall concert was presented by the choir and various vocal groups.

Summer school offers students a chance to further their education during leisure hours of vacation

Lab techniques, an experimental chemistry program, was an innovation added to the various classes offered during the summer. Analyzing modern cosmetics, making DDT and other insecticides, and producing latex and synthetic plastics are experiments offered to students who were given a chance to work at their own rates.

Among the many classes offered to students attending summer school, were drivers' education classes which reached a new high enrollment. Over 200 beginning drivers learned the rudiments of defensive driving and safe driving tactics.

Besides offering physical education classes, the gymnasium was open daily for students wishing to keep fit during summer vacation.

A summer edition of the TROJANAL was published weekly by journalism students and distributed to classrooms on Friday mornings.

Two summer school sessions are equivalent to one semester's work, allowing students who attended class to make up courses, or forge ahead by graduating a semester early.

Learning the basics of defensive driving, Junior Jim Harper practices driving skills under the supervision of a trained driver. Students get a chance to drive two to three times per week, and spend class time studying safety tactics.

The busy hands of a typing student practice touch-type methods in preparation for a time-test measuring skill and ability.

Faculty active in school life

Extra-curricular activities are not confined to students. Highland High teachers are continually active in clubs, social functions and furthering their own education.

Volleyball, badminton, and horseshoes were just some of the sports teachers enjoyed at the fall picnic on the farm of Mrs. Anne Mathew, physical education teacher. It provided a day of relaxation for new teachers to get better acquainted with the rest of the faculty.

Thursday night is league night as the Highland Teachers' Bowling League meets for recreation.

Besides sponsoring clubs and teaching classes, teachers donate their services by running the ticket booths at games, chaperoning dances, and attending PTA meetings.

Mr. Robert Selund carefully explains a strategic play to energetic juniors during half-time of this fall's GAA football game.

Mr. Ed Sekula exhibits good bowling form in one of the many games played during teachers' league night.

Miss Forsberg prepares to bowl in faculty tournament.

"Great! Another strike! Now, let's see that puts us 30 points ahead," thinks Mr. James Owens as he tallies the scores for the teachers' bowling league. The Thursday night session provides entertainment and exercise for Highland High teachers.

With the aggression and enthusiasm needed to teach, Mr. Jon Hendrix pauses to discuss various class tactics with fellow instructors.

Mr. Keppler urges the girls on to a win during the Powder Puff Football Game between junior and senior members of Highland High G. A. A.

Crowds mirror

Crowds of people lined the streets, their faces mirroring excitement and anticipation. Suddenly the band struck up and another homecoming parade was in progress. Floats, gaily decorated cars, and pom-pom girls kept homecoming '66 a colorful tradition.

Half-time was the peak of excitement as Linda Paredes was crowned Queen and announcements of the float trophies were made.

The juniors received the first place trophy for their float, "Sink 'Em." A huge locomotive brought the senior class second place with "We've Been Trainin'." Spanish Club won third place while an honorable mention was given to the FTA car, "Bug 'Em."

After the game, Booster Club sponsored a dance which featured the "Iridescent."

Surprised and delighted, Linda Paredes begins her reign as Homecoming Queen by accepting her crown and encircling the field.

Before the football game, Highland's varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders lead the crowd in pep songs and cheers.

excitement as homecoming parade begins activities

Reviving tradition, the Class of '68 won first prize with their partially submerged pirate ship. Utilizing fifteen thousand tissue carnations, the juniors developed the theme "Sink 'Em," as their entry in the homecoming parade.

Capturing the second place trophy for the class of '67, a huge black and red locomotive engine exhibited the Trojan cry, "We've Been Trainin'." Announcements of the winning floats were given during half-time at the game.

Wearing the traditional homecoming mum along with a hopeful expression, varsity cheerleader Sara Vaughn prays for the extra point that will bring the game to a tie at half-time.

Of homecoming festivities instill spirit in Trojan squad

Homecoming, that magic night of the fall season. All the ingredients were there—a colorful parade of floats, lovely queen candidates and a strong Highland team facing a tough conference foe, Merrillville.

Even before the opening kickoff, excitement prevailed as anxious students awaited the announcement of the winning float. Tradition was broken when the junior class entry, "Sink Em," won first prize.

Action on the gridiron increased this tempo of excitement. An inspired effort by the Trojans failed as the half ended in a 7-7 deadlock.

At halftime, a hush fell upon the crowd and an enthusiastic burst of applause proclaimed Linda Paredes 1966 Homecoming Queen.

Highland's effort to make homecoming night a complete success fell short despite a valiant second half performance. Battling to the final gun, the Trojans went down to defeat with a score of 21-14.

With outstretched arms, varsity football coach Ken Sypult pleads with the mighty Trojans for a touch-down as he directs action from the sidelines. Tension mounted at the homecoming game as Highland and Merrillville fought to break the half-time deadlock.

Emotions rise and joyous tears fall as kings and queens begin reigns

Rhythmic sounds of drums and electric guitars filled the halls of Highland High at the many soc-hops, semi-formals, formals and dances which took place.

Following home football and basketball games, club-sponsored soc-hops provided a chance for clubs and classes to increase their treasury. The Mr. Football and Mr. Basketball Soc-hops, traditionally sponsored by the sophomore class, took place to honor the most outstanding senior basketball and football player.

Highlighting the Christmas season, "Ice Palace," a semi-formal turn-about, was sponsored by GAA. Sara Vaughn and Bill Boyd were crowned snowball King and Queen.

"The Sweetheart Tree" was the theme of the annual Key Club Sweetheart Dance.

Electronically picking an ideal date was an innovation as Highland High's Student Council sponsored the first computer dance. Those planning to attend filled out questionnaires and were matched with two ideal dates.

Unveiling the '67 yearbook cover was the feature of the evening at the Shield Cover Dance. Two autograph dances were also sponsored by the publication, one for seniors and one for underclassmen.

Proudly accepting a congratulatory kiss from the '67 Homecoming Queen Linda Paredes, John Puntillo, newly elected Mr. Football, begins his reign at the annual Mr. Football Dance, sponsored by the Sophomore class.

With tears of happiness falling from her eyes, Highland's Junior Miss, Annette Koselke, proudly stands before a cheering crowd in Frankfort, Indiana, where she received the title of Miss Congeniality.

Varied efforts combine to produce three one-act plays as drama club's autumn project

Suddenly the lights were dimmed and the audience hushed. Curtains opened and the one-act plays began.

Climaxing weeks of work, members of the Drama Club presented three one-act plays on November 17th and 18th. A comedy, "The Trysting Place," a psychological drama, "The Plum Tree" and an example of theater of the absurd, "The Sandbox," challenged the acting ability of those participating.

Hours of rehearsing and memorizing lines preceeded the two performances, but acting was only a small part of the work.

Designing and constructing sets ranging from a hotel lobby to a seashore were tasks of the stage crew. Drama members also strove to design realistic costumes and make-up. Behind the scenes, committees worked with publicity and hospitality, helping to make the three plays a success.

Ron Shropshire, as Lancelot Briggs, is caught in his hiding place by John Ripley and Roscoe Smeltzer, as Rupert Smith and Mr. Ingoldsby.

"Please, let the old women have one last tea party before they leave," pleads Davey, played by Sarah Munier. Irene Kulcsar, as Angelina, can see no purpose in the get-together.

Becky Furnas, playing Miss Tiddle who is mentally unbalanced, insists that she is going to die at precisely 4:00 that afternoon, as Davey tries to calm her.

Lancelot receives a verbal flogging from his overprotective mother, portrayed by Junior Gail Yuhasz, for courting an older woman, when she herself is planning an oncoming marriage.

Kristin Hurt and Laurel Habzansky shed tears of happiness and joy at finding that Laurel, who plays Dora, a poor dishwasher, is really the daughter of aristocratic Kristin.

Tiki huts decorate '66 Junior Prom

Walking across a narrow bridge at the foot of majestic mountains and passing through a dimly lit fishermen's wharf draped with nets and sea-shells, couples found themselves surrounded by palm trees and exotic flowers. A voyage into "Tahitian Midsummer" awaited all those who attended the 1966 Junior-Senior Prom.

Dressed as Polynesian natives, sophomore girls served punch and checked coats from miniature tiki huts. Couples danced to the music of the Bob Leonard Five or sat at tables adorned with coconut shells and bamboo shakers.

Tension mounted as the time for the announcement of the Prom King and Queen drew near. As the band played "Bali Hai," Tammy Gurley was presented with a bouquet of yellow roses and crowned as she stood regally by the new king, Bill Austin. After the crowning, the traditional Grand March was led by the royal couple, bringing the night of exotic splendor and excitement to a colorful close.

Tears of happiness are quickly whisked away from newly-announced Queen, Tammy Gurley by her surrounding court.

Exotic flowers in a star-lit court surround Linda Sulski and Larry Elish as they share a quiet moment together enjoying a night they will long remember.

Happiness and disbelief light the faces of Queen Tammy and King Bill as they dance together beneath a Tahitian sky.

Beginning their reign, just-crowned Bill Austin and Tammy Gurley receive congratulations from Debbie Pasquinelli and Rick Gaston.

Commencement climaxes four years of hard work, enjoyment, progress

Suddenly the tassels were on the other side of the mortarboards, and as they walked away they quickly realized that now they were alumni. The class of '66 was graduating.

It was a long walk to the platform where the diplomas lay waiting, for it brought back the memories of four years with every step. Scenes of parties, last-minute studying for a test, and a first prom flashed before them. Now they were about to cross the threshold into adult life. The past had flown quickly, but the future held promise.

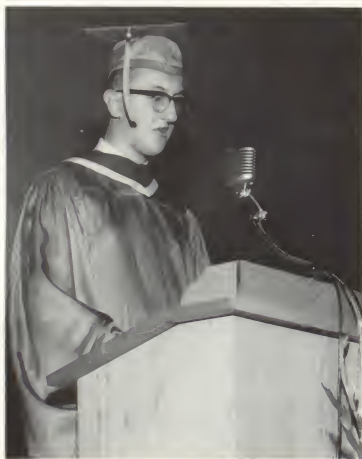

Diplomas in hand, they turned slowly and saw the faces of their classmates, parents and friends. Each face reflected a different emotion—sorrow, joy, anticipation, fear, hope, and nostalgia.

Silently they listened for the last time together to the advice of their class president, salutarian, and valedictorian. Mr. White of Purdue University gave the commencement address and as the class of '66 listened they realized that from the moment that they reached out to receive their diplomas they would begin a new life.

After receiving their caps and gowns, seniors pick up their copies of the SHIELD.

Salutarian Craig Dorschel makes his commencement address.

Mr. Harland White of Purdue University, guest speaker at graduation ceremonies, gives friendly advice in his address.

Proudly accepting her coveted diploma from Mr. Lon P. Monbeck, Karen Eldredge takes a major step forward to the final realization of graduation and her hopes for the future. Chuck Whitaker, class president, assists.

ATHLETICS

A hush falls over the crowd as the basketball player steps up to the free throw line. Muscles tense and eyes burn with determination as the winning ball is shot.

Members of the various athletic teams change every year, but this year also saw many shifts in the coaching staff of Highland High which came with the changes in administration and an expansion in the Trojans' sports program.

This changing facet of sports also brought improved facilities with the completion of the asphalt-cork track around the football field.

Football drills, exercises, batting practice, and wrestling meets are always a part of the athletic scene at Highland High. Only the skill, competition, and drive of the athletes come anew each year.

Jubilant Trojans proudly raise Coach Sypul for a victory ride.

preparation begin in fall with rugged practice sessions

Football players are not Friday night athletes. Football teams cannot be organized the day before a game. Practice and preparation starts early in the fall while the fans are not even thinking of gridiron action.

Early practice sessions are rugged. Muscles must be conditioned for the strain of the hard work which lies ahead and bodies must become accustomed to the contact they will meet.

Forming the conditioned athletes into a team is the job for the coach and his assistants. Positions must be filled with teamwork and co-operation instilled into the players. The practices still continue, wearisome, tiring efforts which ended with an improved 4-5-1 season.

During the season there may be little variation in this pattern. Planning for coming opponents as well as erasing weaknesses found in previous games dominates most of the practice time. There is no glamour, no fans, just other athletes in sweat-faded uniforms, striving for improvement.

Young faces help tell the story of gridiron action better than a writer's pen or copy. Daryl LaBorde gets a momentary rest before going back into action while Paul Mazalon cheers on his teammates. Larry Mays waits attentively for his chance to assist a Trojan victory as Burt Cigler contemplates the outcome of another football battle.

Clutching the ball in his arms Junior half-back Larry Mays charges through the Red Devils defensive line.

Marvin Scheeringa attains fourth place in state

Highland's wrestlers closed the wrestling season with a record of 4-7-1 and placed sixth in the Calumet Conference standings. The team also finished sixth in the sectional tournament.

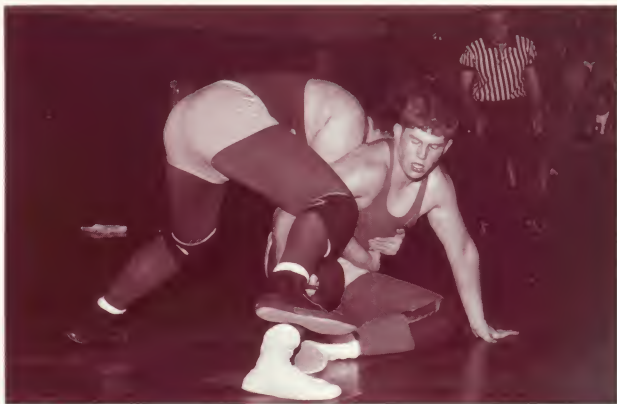

Under the guidance of coach Michael Keppler, the team defeated Valpariso, (34-18); Lowell, (29-19); Hammond High, (28-16); and Munster, (43-11).

Marvin Scheeringa highlighted the Trojan wrestling season with his outstanding performance in the state tourney. Scheeringa, competing in the 95 pound weight class, wrestled his way to a fourth place finish in the tournament, losing in the final round at Indianapolis after capturing sectional and regional victories.

Seniors Rich Phillips and Greg Withrow, along with Scheeringa, proved to be the most consistent members of the Trojan squad. Withrow, heavyweight contender for Highland earned a 10-2 mark.

Senior grappler Tom Falk sticks close to his opponent and begins to drop in plays to pick up points toward his victory. Many long, hard hours of practice under the guidance of Coach Keppler pays off in victorious match results.

Gasping for breath, Highland runner Rick Espitia puts forth a final effort before his lunge for the finish line.

Coach Mike Poehlien gives last minute instructions to his charges before they meet their opponents. Under the first year guidance of Coach Poehlien the cross country team strived for improvement with each meet and worked hard towards a successful season.

Harriers finish season in eighth place in Cal Conference

Off and running in a conference meet, the Trojan harriers battle for positions in the early stages of the race. Highland varsity runner Jim Harper hurries to keep up with the leaders as well as keep a steady pace and maintain energy for a final effort towards the finish line.

Courageous efforts were not enough to withstand the stiff competition the Cross Country team met this year. The Harriers slipped to a 4-10 record in regular meet action.

Of this year's top runners, Rick Espitia, Glen Shacklett, Rich Phillips, John Irish, and Tony Zatkulak, only Phillips is a senior.

During the regular season, the Trojans registered their four victories over Whiting, East Gary, Gary Edison and Hammond Clark.

In the Calumet Conference meet, the Trojan harriers finished eighth in the twelve team field. Rich Espitia led the Highland runners, placing third.

Hobart's 26th Annual Invitational meet was another major contest for the Highland Squad. The team finished 16th out of the 30 schools which participated in the meet.

Highland's Junior Varsity finished the season with a final record of 3-3 including victories over Gary Lew Wallace, Hammond Clark and Munster.

Courtmen end second year with 4-5-1 standing

Fast-paced tennis action added to the tall sports scene at Highland High. This year's team, the second in the school's history, completed the season with a record standing of 4-5-1.

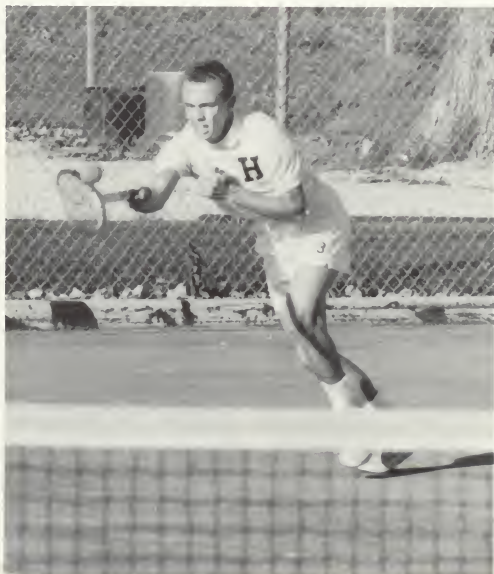

East Chicago Washington defeated Highland 3-2 in the first match of the season. The Trojans rebounded to a 4-1 victory over Griffith before losing their second match of the season to Munster, 3-1.

Coach Harry Mathers' men then registered two shutout victories over Hanover Township and River Forest. The next two contests resulted in defeats for the Trojan team, the first by Gary Wirt and the other by Munster. In a rematch with rival Griffith, Highland again came out on top by a score of 5-0. Crown Point played the Trojans to a 2-2 stand off.

Scott Girman was selected the most valuable player of this year's team. Girman filled the first man singles spot while Paul Erikson played second man singles. Randy Sawtell completed the singles division, playing in the third position.

Brian Benda and Herschel Morris competed in the first doubles team while George Paulsin and Darold Nichols shared second doubles competition with Bruce Wasko.

Selected as the most valuable player of this year's tennis team, Scott Girman strives to achieve a perfect return. Trojans completed the fall season with a record standing of 4-5-1 in singles and doubles competition.

George Paulsin, playing doubles, returns during rematch playoffs with Griffith. The game ended with the Highland Trojans capturing a 5-0 victory.

With eyes alert, muscles tensed and a perfect return, Herschel Morris drives back a serve during a practice session.

Center Jeff Gray, surrounded by Hammond Morton players, breaks free for a short jump shot and possible two point conversion. The Trojans kept pace with the taller Governor team throughout the game but lost the highly contested battle by a 65-62 score.

"You've got to get those rebounds," injects Varsity Coach Randy Sheets as the Trojan cagers enter the last few minutes of a tight game while fellow team mates look on.

Calumet Conference Champs!
The '67 Trojan cagers battled to the top spot in the conference standings with an outstanding 9-2 record against conference competition to share the title with Merrillville.

Desire, hustle and team spirit enabled the tough Highland squad to gain 14 victories during the season against only 6 defeats. Coach Randy Sheets' charges swept to their final five games and entered the Hammond Sectional with high hopes for a sectional victory only to be upset by Munster in the opening round.

Rhett Tauber sparked the Highland offense as the senior guard led Calumet Region scorers with an average of 23.4 points a game. Along with Jeff Gray's 13.8 point average and Jerry Greeson's 12.2 point average, the three Trojan cagers provided the scoring power which led to many victories and the conference crown.

Highland Junior varsity squad ended the season with a 10-10 record, under Coach Paul Schuyler.

Sophomore Burt Cigler protects the ball as he maneuvers his way toward the basket hoping to bag two more points for his J. V. team.

Senior guard Rhett Tauber drives past an East Chicago Roosevelt defender to add another basket to the Trojan score. The Highland sharpshooter averaged 23 points per game to lead Calumet Conference and Region scorers in point totals.

Trojan Thinclads promise season of broken records, conference gains

Pointing for development and improvement of their abilities, the '67 Highland track team began practice sessions in late winter in hopes of a good season.

Coach Mike Poehlein in his initial season as head coach anticipated a better than average season. His leadership, along with the guidance of Assistant Coach Ken Sypult, will increase the chances of the Trojan thinclads to improve last year's last place finish in the contested Calumet Conference.

Lettermen Steve Begala, Rich Olszewski, and Hal Porter promise to give the Trojans an edge in this year's sprint competition. Senior Rich Phillips and Junior Rick Espitia should combine to form a strong threat to any Highland opponent in the distance events. Balancing the Trojan squad with steady performance in the broad jump and high jump contests will be Seniors Jeff Gray, Bill Austin and Sophomore Bob Szabo. Juniors Dan Otto and Dave Begala are expected to do well in the hurdles. In the shot put, Junior Paul Mazalon should add points to the Trojan tally.

Senior Bill Boyd strives to clear the bar in one of the many broad jumping contests he participates in. As a member of the Trojan team, he strives to add another victory to the 1967 season's record.

Agility and proper balance control are some of the many attributes and abilities needed to be a good athlete. Senior George Paulsin climbs high as he thrusts his weight to the other side of the bar with the assistance of his pole.

Among one of the many new faces in sports at H.H.S. is the asphalt and rubber cork track surrounding the football field. Trojan trackmen and near-by school competitors struggle to cross the finish line to victory.

With contorted facial expressions and the dexterous forces of a well-conditioned body, Greg Withrow attempts to better previous shot-putting records.

Hoping to see the ball drop among the outfielders for a base hit, Highland centerfielder Mike Olivotto, watches the flight of the ball as he heads for first base.

Knees high and head down, infielder Tom Fish digs for first base as he attempts to beat the oncoming throw and put a possible run in scoring position for the Trojan team.

With the winning point in view, Trojan outfielder Rhett Tauber strives to make a run, as time becomes pressed.

Trojan baseball success falls on experience of returning Lettermen

Lacking the experience of returning varsity players, the "67" Trojan baseball team began the season in hopes of improving last year's disappointing 5-9 record.

Mr. Leroy Cable, assistant coach last year, will be the head coach of this year's team. Mr. Cable will look to returning lettermen Jerry Greeson, Rhett Tauber, Tom Fish and Mike Olivotto for the ability needed for a successful season.

Griffith's midseason tourney proved to be the highlight of last year's season. The Highland team defeated host Griffith 4-3, then edged Dyer 2-0 to take the tournament crown. The '66 record also included victories over Munster (6-3), Gary Edison (2-0) and Lowell (3-0).

A strong point of this team may be in offensive power. Jerry Greeson led the team last year in batting average with a mark of .325. Greeson was also co-leader with a total of 214 offensive points, along with Bob Barron.

Postures and facial expressions reveal the different inner thoughts of each Trojan player as he prepares to take the field for another baseball battle. Highland played all their home games on a new diamond built last year.

Highly competitive spirit spurs turfmen on to keen sportsmanship, victorious season

Highland High should continue to increase its position as a strong high school golf power as the entire '66 Trojan golf squad will return for competition following last year's outstanding 16-6 record.

Coach Harry Mathers will count on Seniors Dave Tuskan, Bob Barenie and Tom Lengyel along with Juniors Keith Lane and Daryl Slamkowski to lead the team throughout most of the golf season. These five were mainly responsible for last year's record including a Calumet Conference mark of 6 and 3 and a Trojan 3rd place finish in the Conference.

Outstanding team efforts were common as the '66 Trojan turfmen combined for the lowest team score in Highland's brief golf history. The team totaled 154 strokes in a match against E. Gary and Gary Edison, one stroke better than the previous record of 155 set in 1965.

The Trojan golfers captured sixth place in the 26 team sectional at Lake Hills.

Concentration and determination characterize members of the Trojan golf team. Daryl Slamkowski carefully aims his putt.

Careful planning aids Senior Paul Natale.

Using the last waning moments of sunlight to improve their game, two Trojan golfers meet the setting sun on the last tee of a practice round. The Highland linksmen spent many hours of practice in early spring before the season opened and the highly competitive matches began.

Intramural basketball ends in tight play for championship

Intramural competition helped maintain the sports atmosphere at Highland High School this year as 55 boys participated in the basketball league and tourney under the direction of Mr. Robert Selund.

Last year's champs, the Bullets, again proved to be a solid team, but this year they shared the league spotlight with the Lions and the Hawks. The three teams managed identical records of seven wins and one loss and tied for first place honors.

Battling to a four and three record, the Colts claimed fourth place in the eight team field, followed by the Celtics who ended with a three and four record.

Three teams tied for the last spot in the league standings as the Rams, the Eagles and the Warriors were able to capture only one victory each while suffering six defeats.

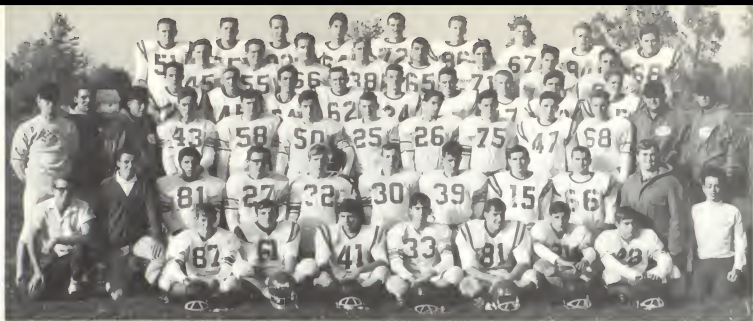

Larry Carrico, sophomore, watches future opponents in action before his own team takes the floor for an intramural battle.

Two intramural players vie for possession of a jump ball as teammates anticipate the direction the play will go during a crucial intramural contest.

Demonstrating the skillful ballhandling required of a good basketball player, sophomore Gary Keown sets up an offensive play to get a quick two points for his intramural team.

HIGHLAND SENIOR HIGH

STUDENT COUNCIL

ORGANIZATIONS

Youthful voices mingle in a busy confusion until they are brought to a halt by the sharp hammering of a gavel upon the lectern and the business-like utterance of "The meeting will now come to order." So begins another club meeting, but each meeting is marked by a continuous exchange of ideas, debate, and activity.

Innovation was the order of the day for the various student organizations of Highland High School. Computer dances, a greater number of club-sponsored scholarships, foreign exchange students, and a victory bell were only a few of the new projects sponsored by the various organizations which enjoyed increased participation and sponsorship by faculty members and students new to Highland school system.

Booster Club, cheerleaders promote sportsmanship

Throbbing heart, hopeful enthusiastic voices, screams, and tears expressing true school spirit—these are the sounds and emotions displayed by the members of Booster Club. The loyal Trojan fans eagerly promoted fair play and good sportsmanship throughout the year, and for the first time, the members attended wrestling matches to support the team.

Their faces reflecting every thrilling moment of tension as they watched anxiously for a score, the cheerleaders led the spectators in rallying the team as their boundless enthusiasm spurred on the Trojans.

Each year they try to initiate newer and snappier cheers to encourage school spirit. They are always ready to cheer the team whether winning or losing and never fail to give a "well done" send off to a devoted team member as he paused for a rest after a workout.

Making plans for the booster block are Lanette Phillips, Tammy Gurley, Mrs. J. Musselman, Carol Groves, and Val Hipp.

In a spirited all-school pep rally preceding the basketball game with arch-rival Griffith High School, varsity cheerleaders lead the lively booster block in a vigorous cry for victory that echoes through the rafters.

Loyally backing JV teams were cheerleaders Laurel Habzansky, Kathy Olivotto, Pat Rhoden, and Karen Black.

Silent and arms folded, Senior Pam Moffett hopefully watches fast-paced Trojan action on the gridiron.

Tense and anxious, Colleen Houchin urges boosters on during a crucial point of a game. The four varsity cheerleaders, all seniors, cheered at both football and basketball games.

Displaying the precision and skill gained after many hours of diligent practice, varsity cheerleaders Pam Moffett, Sara Vaughn, Kathy Pettit, and Colleen Houchin execute one of their many enthusiastic and spirited routines.

G.A.A. Initiates powder-puff football game in activities

It's the bottom of the ninth, bases are loaded, there are two outs and the opposing team has the lead. It's up to me. Tension mounts and fingers cross as the ball is pitched. She swings, it's a home run! These thoughts flitted through the minds of many members of the Girls Athletic Association during one of the most spirited games they played.

G.A.A. allows each member to participate in the sports she enjoys, and enables her to gain a better understanding of good sportsmanship.

A glimmering flicker of candlelight shone on the 62 youthful faces as the club initiated them into membership in the fall. These girls were selected from the points they accumulated during tryouts.

Boy cheerleaders added a humorous touch to the G.A.A. sponsored "Powder Puff" football game which took place in October and featured juniors battling against senior club members.

Heels fly and arms strain as Seniors Elaine Richardson and Joyce Mesman make a final effort for a touchdown during the first G.A.A. powder puff football game. After a bitter struggle between the juniors and the seniors, the game ended with the tie score of 6-6.

Skill and good sportsmanship supported by Lettermen

Hard work, team effort, and good sportsmanship are just some of the many ingredients that make for a successful year for the Highland High School Lettermen whether it was in ushering at games, or manning the concession stand during the halftime at basketball games.

The members of this club have already shown their competence and highly perfected skills as members of the various varsity teams. Each one proudly wears the "H" received in recognition of his athletic achievements.

The Lettermen are constantly striving to improve their school and surrounding community by promoting good sportsmanship, scholarship, clean living, and speech.

One of their most important contributions was the purchase of blue blazers for the coaches and varsity teams which are passed along to each incoming squad. They also presented the school with colorful pennants signifying the schools which participate in the Calumet Conference, which have been placed on the gymnasium walls.

Robert C. Jones, president of the Adult Booster Club, addresses Lettermen during the All Sports Banquet. Awards were presented as recognition for outstanding services.

Triumphantly ringing the victory bell for the first time at a home game, Highland High School lettermen announce Highland Trojans' successful battle with Lowell.

Skill and creative ideas characterize Sign Painter

Sign Painter William Madura carefully outlines block letters as he adds finishing touches to his project. Such creative students help to publicize many club activities throughout the year.

Doug Johnston, Carol Eatinger and Pat Danda, combine their talents to complete another art project.

A brush, some paint, a piece of posterboard, and a hard working "sign-painter"—result, an artistic masterpiece.

Selected for their skill, talent and creative ideas, the members performed publicizing services for many club-sponsored activities such as the Student Council computer dance.

Utilizing the "tools of their trade," the members transformed barren school corridors into a maze of colorful displays. These displays illustrated organizations, or such things as basketball schedules and campaign posters.

To promote national education week within the school system, the club prepared many posters highlighting this year's theme, "Education Adds Up."

Miss M. Bluhm, sponsor, pauses to discuss club projects with officers Rhonda Wallen, Don Ashmann, and Jon Ashmann.

Ready ... march! With the silent drone of the count in their minds, and that steady beat of spirited music in their ears, a performance of the Highland High School Lettergirls began. The crowd was alert as the 16 girls marched on to the field and proudly spelled "Highland Trojans" in bright gold letters.

Polish was added to each maneuver during the weekly hour of practice under the direction of Mrs. "Chuckie" Pope and the assistance of Mrs. A. Mathew, the club's sponsor.

Precision was the prime objective of their work. A performance meant countless intangible rewards for the girls, not only in the applause and smiles they received from their viewers, but the deep satisfaction and personal pleasure it gave them.

New members were accepted following fall tryouts.

Shield staff creates yearbook with hard work, patience

"What! One o'clock in the morning already?" and so another deadline is met. That mysterious boy in the top row is finally identified, the vivid copy is proofread and fitted to the layouts. Then with the completion of many work sessions, all the elements of the Shield are tied together and the staffers succeed in reaching their goal of portraying the story of the year.

A typewriter, a pica ruler, copy paper, and an imaginative mind were among the tools which could be found during a work session. Utilizing these instruments, the staffers diligently work in hopes of producing the best Shield ever published.

All-American was the high aim set for the staffers this year. This high honor was bestowed upon the 1966 Shield by the NSPA rating service, along with an A+ rating from the NSYA, another judging service.

Adding a finishing touch to their hard-earned knowledge and basic skills, the major position holders traveled to many college and university campuses.

Making last minute corrections on copy blocks and captions are section editors Peg Heim, personalities; Sue Kwolek, co-layout editor; Bonnie Bard, organizations; Rudy Lomberger, sports; Laura Rincon, ad section and Betty Cote, opening section. Activities such as this were ordinary as deadlines approached and staffers worked to make this year's Shield an outstanding publication.

Possible ideas for the 1967 Shield are discussed by major editors Karen Schuyler, Pam Moffett, Pam Mucha, Mr. Richard Johns, Sandy Budzinski, Frida Nelson, and Colleen Houchin.

Scrapbook kept

The fluent flow of ink on to paper, the click of a shutter closing, the search for a fitting adjective or descriptive adverb—these are the sounds of creation—the creation of the CENTAUR.

A new size and a new format made the CENTAUR a general interest publication. For the first time, photography and special articles were included in this bi-annual magazine.

Much time and effort went into its preparation by Judy Hmurovic, editor-in-chief; and Jo Ellen Robbins, associate editor. They were assisted by a qualified staff and many creative students.

Distribution of news releases to area newspapers throughout the year was the task of Highland High School's News Bureau which was headed up by Cheryl Buser, general manager.

A scrapbook is kept yearly which contains the numerous columns and pictures produced by the News Bureau staff which have resulted from the diligent weekly efforts of the entire staff.

A general interest magazine with a new size and format was created through the diligent efforts of Jo Ellen Robbins, associate editor, Judy Hmurovic, editor-in-chief, and Nell Bowers, head bookhead who worked with a competent staff to produce the CENTAUR.

by News Bureau; CENTAUR distinguished by changes

Pouring over final copies and making last minute checks on news releases are only minor tasks of Debbie Rogus, feature editor; Sarah Munier, head photographer; Dolores Mutke, news editor; and Cheryl Buser, general manager. Fine efforts have produced an efficient News Bureau.

Rushing to put the finishing touches on a final news story, Cheri Murphy, Cheryl Kula, Ruth Kading, Cheryl Durling, Kathy Pettit, and Jane Middleton help NEWS BUREAU to bring Highland High news to the community.

Junior, Bill Rezny discusses the necessity of the telephoto lens in interior photography with senior, Ross Gambrill.

TROJANAL staff circulates news

With the clicking of typewriters, Trojanal staffers finish a new story with the final "30." Throughout the year, the TROJANAL, Highland High's school newspaper, informs the students and faculty with facts, features and photos.

Published weekly, the TROJANAL is a student publication in the true sense of the word. Layouts are made and assignments given out by page editors to staffers who report and write their stories. The managing editor writes headlines as all others complete their respective jobs.

Bringing the news to summer school students, too, the summer TROJANAL staff also publishes a weekly newspaper.

Both publications feature student surveys, reports on the latest fads and fashions, editorials on controversial subjects, sports reviews and school news.

Senior Jerry Dijak paused to explain the minute mechanisms included in the complex instrument, the camera.

Students gain knowledge, experience by attending summer workshops at universities

Participating in mock courts and governments at Indiana University were Highland's representatives at Girls' and Boys' State, Mark Malangoni, Brenda Logan, Ron Shropshire, Larry Casada and Judy Hmurovic, all seniors.

Attending the world affairs tour this spring were seniors Sandy Budzinski, June Nelson, and Paul Woolston. The tour included attending sessions at the United Nations in New York and visiting the capitol and other national monuments in Washington D.C.

Up at 6:00 a.m., breakfast by 7:00, followed by a dizzying schedule of classes and lectures—Highland High students travelled through the U.S. and three foreign countries this summer.

Aspiring journalists returned from institutes with new skills as twenty-three staffers exchanged ideas at Ohio, Michigan State, Ball State and Indiana Universities.

Representatives at Indiana University's Student Council workshop discussed school projects while Girls' and Boys' State delegates organized mock governments.

Chile, Argentina, and Uruguay were the destinations of Highland's foreign exchange students.

Three seniors travelled to Washington D.C. and New York City, touring foreign embassies and landmarks.

Students cultivated interests in music, drama and math at universities, which helped to keep Highland High abreast of modern techniques.

TROJANAL and SHIELD staffers attending summer workshops at Ball State and Michigan State Universities were Pam Moffett, Cheryl Walker, Sara Vaughn, Sue Gilbert, Karen Rodgers, Suzanne Kwolek, Kathy Chaibai and Betty Cote.

Roscoe Smeltzer, Sue Woodfill, Sandy Budzinski, Frida Nelson, and John Thompson attended Indiana University's summer institute as representatives of Highland's journalism department. The institute, which lasted two weeks, taught modern techniques in the fields of layouts, copy-writing, and photography.

Attending Ohio University's journalism workshop during June were S. Baade, C. Kula, M. Beretz, S. Bishop, P. Corten, J. Klein, L. Habzansky. TOP ROW: J. Dijak, S. Bennett, L. Rincon, P. Heim, B. Bard, J. Robbins, and M. Sheets, all juniors and seniors. The one-week workshop was a prelude to their positions in fall.

John Ripley and Cheryl Walker attended Indiana University's student council workshop while Suzanne Kowlek attended a math institute and Marilyn Bacon studied drama. The three institutes lasted for one week with students living and attending classes on campus.

Quill and Scroll Honors journalists

Honoring top journalists, the Allen J. Warren chapter of Quill and Scroll selects its members from students in the upper third of their class, and who hold major positions on one of the four publications, SHIELD, TROJANAL, CENTAUR and NEWS BUREAU. Members are inducted at a candlelight ceremony by officers Susan Woodfill, Pam Moffett, Tammy Gurley, and Frida Nelson, and sponsor, Mr. Richard Johns.

Hearts flutter and hands shake as positions for the next year are announced at the annual Quill and Scroll Banquet. All students taking journalism are invited. Trophies and certificates of merit are also given to outstanding workers, including the most valuable staffer award and the Allen J. Warren Award, the highest journalism award for a student at Highland High.

All members are given gold pins and cards as symbols of their membership in the international organization.

Selling baked goods at the Quill and Scroll bake sale are Sandy Budzinski and Sue Woodfill.

N.H.S. members don gold tassels for graduation

Long hours of class preparation and diligent study proved successful as the National Honor Society announced its new members at the awards convocation. Those selected in the spring are chosen from the top ten per cent of the junior class and are honored at the Annual Alpha Sigma Delta Scholastic Banquet.

Other members were chosen in the fall from the top fifteen per cent of the senior class and were inducted into the society at the club's Christmas party.

The entire faculty votes to choose members who have shown outstanding leadership qualities as well as distinctive scholastic achievements during their high school career.

Each student graduating who has maintained a B or better average throughout high school is provided with a cowl to wear with his graduation robe.

Members of the National Honor Society also wear golden tassels instead of the regulation blue in recognition of their scholastic achievements.

To help raise money for various projects, National Honor Society sponsors an annual bake sale. Sue Woodfill, Pam Mucha, and Sandy Budzinski count change and keep an accurate account of sales and funds.

Sesquicentennial Pageant, Sweetheart

Semi-Formal sponsored by Key Club

Mix fifty-one ambitious members together with one guiding sponsor, and what have you got? The Key Club.

Such things as selling holly to promote Christmas spirit, sponsoring the Sweetheart Semi-Formal in February, and acting as ushers during convocations and other school-sponsored functions are just a few of the club's many varied activities.

This year the Key Club had the honor of presenting the Highland Sesquicentennial Pageant in which Kathy Pettit was crowned Highland's Sesquicentennial Queen on the basis of beauty and poise.

The Highland High School Key Club also sponsors a Parent-Appreciation Banquet in the fall and sends delegates to the convention in Indianapolis which takes place in the spring of every year.

Club officers Tom Palmer, president; Mark Malangoni, vice president; Kelley Okamoto, secretary; Jack Stepp, treasurer; and Mr. Jon Hendrix, sponsor, along with the Board of Directors Bruce Wasko, Tom McDonald, and Dave Ranich, help to formulate ideas for the club and plan all future activities.

F.T.A. efforts result in prize-winning homecoming entry

Wings, beady eyes, and hundreds of napkin flowers provided a decorative camouflage for the Future Teachers of America car in the Homecoming Parade where they received an honorary mention for their entry "Bug 'Em."

On November 17, interested members could be seen boarding a bus for Hammond Tech, where the annual FTA round-up took place. This year, the members studied the many facets of teaching and shared their ideas with students from surrounding schools.

In accordance with the National Education Week, the members prepared their annual breakfast for the teachers of Highland High. As a token of respect, the teachers were also presented with corsages and boutonnieres as they entered the library, where the breakfast took place.

Active for the past eight years this organization has promoted interest in the teaching field by awarding scholarships to deserving members.

Rounding out the year's activities were a soc-hop and a moving, candle-light ceremony conducted in the fall.

Hours of work and preparation by Future Teachers of America officers and members resulted in their prize-winning homecoming entry, "Bug 'Em," which was particularly cited by the judges for its ingenuity and originality.

While preparing for "a visit by the doctor," M.C.C. officers pause to examine the intricate parts of the human eye under the direction of Mr. Jon Hendrix, sponsor.

M.C.C. members exposed to many facets of medicine

While discussing new ideas for an eventful year, Medical Career Club members Linda Harris, Donna Lassanske, Paul Woolston, and Richard Pope plan trips to the Hinsdale Health Center and a picnic to the Dunes State Park. These future members of the medical careers also made plans for various speakers for their meetings throughout the year.

"Doctor Smith, you are wanted on the 3rd floor." The ring of the intercom, a shuffle of feet, the clatter of instruments, and an exhaustive sigh of relief as a human heartbeat is once more heard.

These are the sounds of a hospital and the gift of life which has been instilled in a grateful patient. The sounds that might someday be part of the everyday life of one of the 68 aspiring doctors, nurses, physical therapists, and medical technicians who are pursuing their chosen vocations as active members of the Medical Careers Club, one of the many career clubs at Highland High.

Along with hearing specialists from the many fields of medicine who explained in detail the medical opportunities of their profession, the club members' plans included field trips to the Hinsdale Health Center and to the Medical Careers Club convention which took place at Indiana University in February.

Under the leadership of club officers Donna Lassanske, treasurer; Paul Woolston, president; Linda Harris, secretary, and Lola Worker, vice president; the members sponsored a soc-hop in the fall to finance their projects. A picnic at the Dunes State Park was also planned as one of the club's activities in the spring by the M.C.C. officers and sponsor.

Take a memo . . . I need 30 copies of this letter before you leave. Even with all the new conveniences of Xerox and the other equipment that occupies a modern office in the 20th century, businessmen and women are not dispensable. Whether striving to be a secretary or the president of a company, Highland High School students find a guiding hand in membership in the Future Business Leaders of America club.

Putting aside the typewriters and letters for a moment, the students took time out; not for a coffee break, but to sponsor their annual toy drive to help the less fortunate children during the yuletide season.

Taffy-apples were next on the agenda, and acted as the most profitable project for the club.

Sharing their thoughts about the business world, the members concluded the year by traveling to Ball State University in Muncie for the annual convention which took place there in the spring.

Planning an eventful year are F.B.L.A. officers Dianne Marcus, Pat Farkas, Donna Humpfer, Deb Mercer, Lannette Phillips, and Lynn Olney. Assisting them in their decisions are club sponsors Miss Sharon Forsberg and Miss Sylvia Walker.

Cuddling their furry friends beside them, Seniors Denise Benante, Lanette Phillips, Lynn Olney, Donna Humpfer, Linda Darchuck, and Diane Marcus discuss the F.B.L.A. toy drive for needy children. Members of the club make this drive an annual tradition as well as sponsoring other activities during the year.

F.H.A. members gain homemaking skills by hosting tea

What do I want to do with my life? This thought-provoking question has plagued the American teen-age girl for many years. Some have answered it by becoming career girls, but others have chosen to become wives.

Members of the Future Homemakers Association have chosen the latter. These girls want to be homemakers—not just housewives, and are constantly striving to gain the all-important experience of being a good hostess.

Pie pans clatter, mixers are set at full speed, and a cake is created. These and many other things are part of the preparation for the club's mother-daughter tea. The girls annually plan and host this function to display their newly acquired skills.

Under the supervision of Mrs. R. Johns, the club planned many projects, which included their annual bake sale. Assisting her were club officers Betty Suroviak, Nancy Suplick, Pat Habel, and Janet Klein.

F.H.A. members Linda Pugh, Jackie Murphy, Betty Suroviak, Nancy Suplick, and Mrs. Richard Johns, sponsor, come to an agreement on one of the club's many activities. These activities help girls to become successful homemakers.

Vietnamese girl adopted by Y-Teens as service project

Linking the school with the community, Y-Teens served as a service club, and was affiliated with a sister club, the Young Women's Christian Association.

To show their love for mankind, the girls took many baskets of food to the needy. They also made favors for hospital patients to help make their stay in the hospital more pleasant.

A little orphan girl in Vietnam was made a little happier and the future became brighter because the members of Y-Teens sent gifts, money and letters each month for her support. These girls gave fully of their time and talents to help people in need whenever possible. To support all of their projects, they sponsored a potato chip sale.

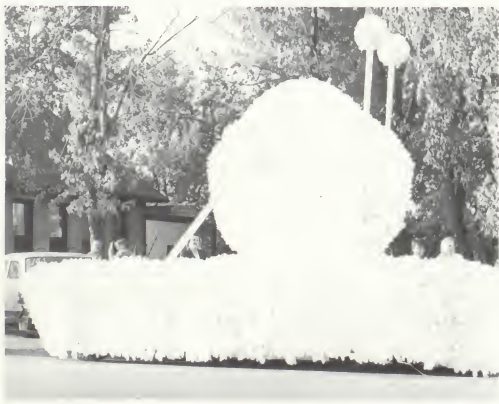

Debby Swarens, Linda Aker, Paulette Nichols, Gail Rogers and Judy Rabatin wrap packages to be taken to hospital patients.

Language clubs broaden knowledge of foreign customs

Capturing the Trojan spirit, "Beat 'Em." Spanish Club's entry in the homecoming parade won third prize trophy. Club members were kept active during the year sponsoring enumerable projects including an annual card party and style show.

Flashing lights, brilliant colors, and clamoring voices of youth were among the festive sights and sounds echoed in the corridors as the French Club sponsored their annual Mardi Gras. Captivating the excitement of New Orleans and the joyous mood of the pre-lenten season, the members provided an enjoyable evening for all in attendance.

A change of seasons and a change of setting brought about a more tranquil scene as the familiar tunes of favorite old German carols were sung by the German Club members. The culture and customs of the German people were also explored by the students when they traveled to Chicago and viewed a German film.

With the shuffle of feet amidst the muffled chatter of an enthusiastic audience, Spanish Club sponsored their annual card party. This year the club also sent three of their members to South American countries to broaden their scope of the Spanish language and the customs.

Trojan victories told by Student Council Victory Bell

Juniors Betty Cote and Sally Bennett, captivated by the Christmas spirit, cheerfully assist in the delivering of Yuletide mail. Betty places the cards in the Student Council mail box while Sally marks them with the correct homeroom number.

"This meeting will now come to order." With the sharp blow of the gavel on the lectern, this phrase, resounded throughout the brightly lit library as another Student Council meeting was under way.

Books, pens, soap, and life savers were among the many gifts sent to the soldiers in Vietnam this year during the drive sponsored by Student Council. These gifts provided an answer to the ever-present question of the serviceman, "Does anyone care?"

Automation uprooted shy wallflowers at the computer dance, a new innovation presented by the Student Council this past spring.

Under the sponsorship of Mr. James Owens, and Mr. Charles McGinley, this organization also promoted enthusiasm during a spirit week which took place prior to the Highland-Griffith basketball game. They also sponsored the purchasing of the Victory Bell which was bought through the contributions of Highland High students.

Christmas cheer was also spread through the efforts of Student Council as they provided a student Christmas card mailing service.

Serving as president was Cheryl Walker. Aiding her in her duties are John Ripley, Sally Bennett, Kevin Roche, and Betty Cote, Student Council officers.

Student Court enforces school rules; three class justices preside in courtroom proceedings

No wigs in this courtroom, for the responsibilities weighing on the shoulders of Justices Alan Howarth, Jim Haroer, and Dave Ranich leave no room for non-essentials.

A typical hearing over which they preside is preceded by many hours of reviewing past cases relating to the current case. Whenever an offense is committed, the Court system swings into action.

This year, Sue Baade, bailiff, arranged the court calendar after the monitors turned in court notices. Assisting Sue was Fran Potesak, who acted as recording clerk.

After an impartial jury had been sworn in, Sue Pelc presented the case. Prosecuting Attorney Donna Kelley then cross-examined for contradictions under the guidance of Mr. George Smook.

The sentence for misdemeanors such as running or eating in the halls may require the accused to serve "time," washing windows or performing other services.

Senior justice Alan Howarth rules with a stern hand as he listens to the case of two boys brought before the Student Court for breaking one of the rules of Highland High.

Current world affairs discussed by Social Science Club

Guest speakers highlighted some of the lively meetings of the Social Science Club. Reporting on a variety of current world affairs brought out the individualism in each of the twenty-two interested and enthusiastic members during the brisk discussions which followed.

Under the leadership of Jon Ashmann, president; John Bozak, vice president; Tom Arner, treasurer; and Brad Kucer, ICC representative; the club started off its second year of existence by sponsoring a book drive which proved to be a great success. All money making projects were designed with the basic idea behind them of helping the lonely or deprived of the world.

Aiding the officers this year were advisors Mr. D. Young and Mr. E. Kelly, teaching U.S. History and World History, respectively. With their diligent help, the club maintained their purpose of encouraging the study of the social sciences in order to create interest in government, world problems, and current events.

With soap suds, sponges, and a little elbow grease, Social Science club members combine their efforts to raise club funds. All money making projects, including a book drive, were aimed towards helping the needy and lonely of the world.

Argonne visited by Science Club

Research and development are key words in every industry, and Science Club members are given an early opportunity to satisfy their curiosity and delve into the mysteries of such exciting activities as atom smashing and nuclear fission. Since many important industries are located in the Calumet Region, one is able to visit them and get first-hand knowledge of their activities.

Argonne National Laboratory was the site of a field trip attended by members of Science Club. They were then able to view the complex work done in the laboratory, where they gained an insight into some of the exciting discoveries being made everyday which will affect mankind in the future.

Guest speakers also informed the members about various techniques of modern science. Supplementing the planned activities, the club had laboratories where they were assisted by officers and club sponsors Mr. J. Hallett and Mr. J. Bianchetta.

Mr. J. Bianchetta and Mr. J. Hallett worked together as co-sponsors of the Science Club to maintain its efficient methods.

Ted Kwolek, Paul Erickson, Steve Pecsek, and Ward Cunningham revell over the wonders they are seeing on a field trip to Argonne National Laboratories. Current discoveries that will have great effects on the people of the future were among some of the highlights viewed.

Forensics present melodrama

"Curses, foiled again," said the villain as the curtains closed on the melodrama, "Dora, the Beautiful Dishwasher, or the Heroine Cleans Up."

"Entertaining, delightful," were comments from parents at the annual open house. Forensics entertained them after they visited classrooms. This was their first dramatic effort of the year under sponsor Roy Chapman.

Under the heading of more serious business, the members prepared for some exciting debates. Each contest helped sharpen their wits for the annual state-wide contest at Ball State University.

Yet, all was not serious as they enjoyed other facets of their program such as original oratory, extemporaneous and humorous speech.

As a member of the Calumet Forensic League, members attended the Annual Spring Conference for area schools.

The Lawyer, Tom Boyer, advises Mrs. Hyacinth, a rich widow portrayed by Kris Hurt, about her marriage plans to an arch-villain scheming against Dora. Hector, played by Bob Combs, who plans to marry Dora listens intently to the discussion.

Tears of joy are shed as Dora, played by Laurel Habzansky, learns that her employer, Kris Hurt, is really her long-lost mother.

Literary Club discusses themes, plots of famous works

Judge Taylor was polling the jury: "Guilty ... guilty ... guilty ... guilty ..." Mystery, suspense, thrills, and action all come alive as one ventures into the world of books. One can travel to many foreign and exotic countries without leaving the comfort of one's home—all this from books.

Investigations on many famous literary works are conducted by members of the Highland High School Literary Discussion Club. The club, which is under the leadership of June Nelson, chairman, meets semi-monthly.

Analyzing theme, setting, character, and plot, new ideas are brought into life and members increase their knowledge of the literary world. Among those books read and reviewed were "To Kill a Mockingbird" and "Ethan Fromme."

The club is comprised of juniors and seniors who have a "B" average and who have a genuine desire to delve deeply into the meaning of the books selected.

Reflecting upon a student's remark, Mr. Kellam heads an interesting and lively discussion of "To Kill a Mockingbird."

Members listen intently as Mr. Kellam, Literary Discussion Club sponsor, accents a major point. Evaluating his comments and offering their own opinions, members delve deeply into the theme, plot, and setting of a book.

Drama club displays creative acting, designing talent

Mounting tension, and surges of anxiety were among the feelings which permeated through the systems of the Drama Club members before the curtain was drawn and their performance began. The actors scurried about as they fervently repeated their lines. Everyone was anxious and tingling with excitement as the show was about to begin.

Afterwards came satisfaction and the pulsating thrills which beat throughout the workers who so faithfully completed their task. This is Drama Club—a large group of students acting, designing, and creating as each takes part in the production of a play.

This year, the club planned many activities. Among them was a trip to the Indiana University extension, where they saw the play "Death of a Salesman." They also produced three one act plays, "The Plum Tree," "The Trysting Place," and "The Sandbox."

Gifted members of Drama Club Jean McShane, treasurer; Marilyn Bacon, president; Donna Lassanske, secretary and Jane Middleton, vice president; carefully read and discuss one of the plays being considered for spring production.

Romance is not confined to the young, as Roscoe Smeltzer, playing a lonely bachelor who waited years for the right woman to come along, proposes to widow Mrs. Briggs, played by Gail Yuhasz.

A final, comforting tea for the old ladies in "The Plum Tree" is interrupted by Mrs. Christenson, played by Marilyn Bacon, who tries to remember a past incident and threatens everyone with scissors.

Concert and pep bands present autumn, spring programs,

With lively songs and formations, the marching band adds spirit and color to football games.

Stepping high, drum major Larry Meschi practices his role as leader of the marching band as it performs at football games.

With expressive hands, Mr. Edwin Kibiger, band director, translates sheet music into a vibrant melody. Such effective direction and leadership are key words in the success of Highland High School's Band.

With the down beat of a baton or the shrill of a whistle the band is once more underway with another entertaining performance. Whether marching in formation on the football field, playing for the enjoyment of a varied audience, or accompanying lettergirls, the band helped to promote school spirit.

The concert band, on the other hand offered a more classical type of program which provided a vibrant stimulant for its listeners. Each year they present a spring and fall concert. For the past decade they have participated in the Northern Indiana School Band, Orchestra, and Vocal Association contest.

Volunteer musicians working under the direction of Mr. E. Kibiger, band director, make up a group known as the Pep Band. These students boost spirit and encourage the basketball team members to put their all into the game.

PERSONALITIES

Long nose, small mouth, high forehead, dreamy eyes—each face in the crowd is different, yet the personalities that lie beneath are even more unique. The brain, the egotist, the sociable, the naive, the leader—all types can be found at Highland High School.

New faces appear among the old every year. Sophomores join the ranks of the student body, and new teachers arrive to fill vacancies and expand the faculty to keep in pace with a growing curriculum and student body. Even the administration took on a new countenance as positions were juggled to fill vacancies of changing times in education.

And with all these changes came new problems, new attitudes, and new ideas, changing the complex and many faceted face of Highland Senior High School.

Administration co-ordinates phases of student life

In addition to his duties as assistant principal, Mr. Merlin Clinkenbeard also serves as athletic director.

Principal Robert Day works together with faculty and administration to answer all questions and problems.

Supervision and guidance are the daily concern of the administration of Highland Senior High School.

Working in the new administrative center are Mr. Allen J. Warren, superintendent; Mr. Clyde M. Sumner, assistant superintendent; and Mr. Paul J. Kienzynski, director of the social service department.

Serving on the Board of Trustees are Mr. Robert Ross, president; Mr. John Strange, secretary; and Mr. Andrew Sobek, treasurer. These men coordinate the Highland school system.

Questions and problems are carefully handled by Principal Robert Day and Assistant Principal Merlin Clinkenbeard.

Always ready with a helping hand are Mrs. Annabelle Shone, Mr. John Fruth, Mr. James Owens, and Mr. Raymond Hansen, members of the guidance department. They aid students in choosing class schedules and finding the college suited to the individual. The administration co-ordinates the many phases of student life and serves as a link between the schools and the community.

Guidance counselors Mrs. Annabelle Shone, Mr. John Fruth, Mr. James Owens, and Mr. Raymond Hansen advise and encourage students throughout the year. Mr. Paul Kienzynski serves in the capacity of director of the department of social service over all Highland's school system.

Staff assists administration, teachers and student body

Finally the bell rings, it's time for lunch. As one nears the cafeteria, he is confronted by the aroma of another appetizing meal.

Well balanced menus are planned and served daily to please the students of Highland High. Serving as director of the cafeteria is Geneva Hill.

Washing windows and sweeping floors are only a few of the tasks performed by janitor Lloyd Greene and janitress Tillie Kaczmarek. Their efficient work brightens a routine school day. Efforts continue into the night as Mike Giba and his staff begin their work.

Always ready with a helping hand are the office secretaries, Mrs. Laurene Coles, Mrs. Grace Reichers, Mrs. Myrtle Watson and Mrs. Eleanor Church busily type, answer telephone calls, and write letters. Conscientiously they perform their many duties which aid the faculty, administration and student body.

Bandages, iodine and thermometers are all used in a day's work by school nurse, Mrs. Ida Deceuster.

Custodians Tillie Kaczmarek, Mike Giba, Ernie Criswell, Ray Walker, Don Poole, Lloyd Green and Stanley Haines efficiently keep the high school in order. They continually strive to maintain the appearance of the school and its surroundings.

Pausing for a moment during a busy day are members of the cafeteria staff: D. Steiber, P. Tucker, W. Swiencone, J. Hall, G. Moore, A. Wimer, G. Stupek, M. Neyhart, and M. Markovich. They strive daily to serve nourishing meals to the students and faculty.

Mrs. Coles adds some important figures on the office adding machine.

Mrs. Grace Reichers handles all seniors' college entrance materials.

Mrs. Eleanor Church watches as Mrs. Myrtle Watson answers another inquiry. As secretaries, they aid students and faculty.

High school nurse, Mrs. Ida Deceuster, cheerfully tests Sophomore Gail Mercer's hearing. Mrs. Deceuster, a significant member of the staff, has the responsibility of keeping both faculty and student body healthy.

Faculty strives to provide interesting assignments

Work is never done for the faculty of Highland Senior High School as they strive to make learning easier through interesting assignments and stimulating discussions. Efforts continue out of the classroom as they grade papers, plan class activities and learn new improved teaching techniques.

Eighteen new members were added increasing the faculty membership to sixty-two. Their many skills and talents were evident as they painstakingly aided students in the learning process.

Explaining the principles of computer programming, Mr. Donald Clark demonstrates how quick and accurate results are obtained.

Sophomores start year of projects with car wash

"Where is room 23?" "I can't find my locker!" "What in the world is a D-period?" These are just a few of the exclamations made by the class of '69 as they entered Highland Senior High School.

Sophomores worked enthusiastically to create their homecoming float, their first major project as a class, which was appropriately titled "No Sweat—We'll Win." By cheering Trojan teams to victory, the class of '69 began to feel they were truly members of a senior high school student body.

Money making projects for the year began with a successful car wash. At the end of an exciting football season, sophomores sponsored the Mr. Football soc-hop which is given annually to honor the most outstanding player of the year. The class of '69 also sold sweatshirts to devoted Trojan boosters.

Sophomores were led in their many activities by Kevin Roche, president; Chris Dietz, vice president; Rinkje Hoogewerf, secretary; and Malanie Kubiak, treasurer. Serving as class sponsors were Miss Sylvia Walker and Mr. Mike Poehlein.

After the transition had been made from confused and excited newcomers, the class of '69 finally became active members in Highland Senior High School's student life as they enthusiastically participated in various school-sponsored functions throughout the year.

The product of hard work, spirit, and determination was the sophomore float, "No Sweat." Cheering their prized effort in the home-coming parade, the class of '69 awaited the judges' decision during half-time festivities.

Junior class plans, efforts prove worthwhile as judges

Ten thousand kleenex flowers are stuffed into chicken wire as members of the class of '68 work diligently to make the junior class float, "Sink 'Em," a reality. Such hard work was rewarded when the sinking pirate ship captured first place.

Tension mounted as the third and second place trophies were awarded, and then ... "First place, the class of '68!" A cheer went up from the juniors. They had done it. They were the first class in three years to produce a winning homecoming float as juniors.

Class rings were purchased and worn by the class of '68 as symbols of their mounting authority. Juniors moved to the center of the Booster Block where the games became a little clearer and the cheering a little louder.

Enthusiasm and cooperation were displayed to the highest degree as the class of '68 began to plan and create the 1967 Prom. From the first planning session until the last decoration was in place, the juniors strived to make their prom a success.

Finally the big test came, the prom itself. The queen was crowned and the last dance was danced, the prom which had slowly and painstakingly become a reality had all too soon become a memory for those couples attending.

Seniors switch tassels to left side, quickly become alumni

Senior class officers plan the purchase of their class gift. Leading the class of '67 to its conclusion were Marge Sheets, secretary; Annette Koselke, president; Hal Porter, vice-president; and Sue Gilbert, treasurer.

Faces reflect feelings. These feelings gradually change from those of a bewildered sophomore to an enthusiastic junior and finally to a proud senior. So the class of '67 acquired their new face.

Traditionally the seniors took their place in the first few rows of the booster block at all football and basketball games. The class of '67 industriously built their homecoming float, "We've Been Trainin'."

Seniors proudly wore their senior beanies as symbols of their newly acquired authority, while the senior court saw many new faces as it became the private domain of the class of '67.

Emotions were mixed as baccalaureate and commencement rapidly approached. Senior exams, the announcement of the senior class gift and the senior class party were all a part of the last hectic week. With the turning of tassels came the realization that the class of '67 had entered a new way of life.

Seniors Suellen Harveth, Lannette Phillips, Sue Gilbert, Nell Bowers, and Val Hipp reign as 1967 Homecoming Court. These girls are chosen by the members of the Highland football team during the autumn season.

Seniors' last year is full of fun, excitement as last Prom, Homecoming top year's activities

Spirited hearts became a part of the Senior High School corridors as the class of '67 joined the enrollment in 1965. The 366 individuals faced bewildering schedules and soon began to evolve into the society of upperclassmen as they undertook the construction of their float, "Goodyear for Highland."

Lead by Sue Woodfill, president; Sara Vaughn, vice president; Annette Koselke, secretary; and Larry Peterson, treasurer, the characteristic perplexities of their faces were removed as they became more involved in activities.

Keeping with the pace of the go-generation, the sophomores rapidly matured into proud juniors. Class rings were received and served as a symbol of seniority. Uniting the class with the leadership needed to produce their '66 Homecoming float, "Dey Ain't Wirt Nuthin," were officers Mike Olivotto, president; Annette Koselke, vice president; Kay Nelson, secretary; and Margie Sheets, treasurer.

Car washes were among the money-making projects which preceded the diligent work on the long awaited creation of their Junior-Senior Prom, "Tahitian Midsummer," where Bill Austin and Tammy Gurley were crowned King and Queen.

"We're the class that's sent from Heaven," depicted the pride of the newly acclaimed seniors as they moved to the bottom rows of the booster blocks, only to experience the final excitement of supporting "their Trojan teams."

Traditionally, the seniors gained possession of the senior court. Senior beanies became prominent and a large 67 was placed on the watertower—their mark was made.

Under the leadership of Annette Koselke, president; Hal Porter, vice president; Margie Sheets, secretary; and Sue Gilbert, treasurer; the many decisions of responsibility were met and the pondering Seniors chose their motto, colors, and presented their gift to the school as anticipation of graduation mounted. And so, as the years had rapidly passed, graduation soon remained but a fondly cherished memory.

Silhouetted in a lonely hall, monitors study quietly when not checking lockers or signing hall passes.

Activities complete high school years

Elaine Wilhelm, Max Mejan and Randy Osborn concentrate on building the last homecoming float.

Symbolic of senior year, the senior court and '67 claimed water tower dominate the scene at Highland High.

Picked from the junior class, 1966 Prom King and Queen nominees were voted on by all who attended the Junior-Senior Prom.

Taking advantage of senior privileges, a group of seniors relax in the fresh air of the senior court. The court has been traditionally the domain of seniors since 1961 and was furnished and landscaped by gifts of graduating classes.

Senior cheerleader Sara Vaughn intently studies a quarterback play during one of the last football games of '66.

"Bury those Panthers!" Class project day found the senior court complete with a mock grave of a Griffith football player during the Student Council-sponsored spirit week preceding the football game against Griffith High School.

Modern generation chooses the sparkling taste of Pepsi for quenching hearty thirsts on all occasions

Relaxing after the final deadline, major editors Pam Moffett, Sandy Budzinski, Pam Mucha, Colleen Houchin, Sara Vaughn, and Kathy Quigg join the Pepsi generation and toast the completion of the SHIELD.

Greeting you at your very first thirst-quenching sip of Pepsi is pure refreshment. No matter what the age, that come-alive taste is always a favorite.

Teem and Diet-Pepsi are innovations created by the Pepsi bottlers. Teem-people, Diet-Pepsi-people and Pepsi-people have united forces to form that swingin' generation, that Pepsi generation.

After an active day at school, just about everyone from students to teachers needs a lift. How can you get that lift? Just lift the cap on a bottle of Pepsi ... that zingy, zesty flavor will help you to pull yourself through that time of day when those "thirst-throbs" begin to set in.

This is the time of the in-generation, the swing generation, the Pepsi-generation. So, come-alive! It's time that you're in the Pepsi generation.

The Pepsi General Bottlers in this area are located at 1112 W. Chicago Avenue, East Chicago, Indiana, for your convenience.

Pleasing food and friendly service attract all age groups at Johnsen's Blue Top of Highland

Once again Fatty Eatmuch was traveling North on U.S. 41 through Highland. Remembering her last jaunt through this town she recalled a fine restaurant. "Could it be a mirage?" Fatty asked herself. "Is that the same exquisitely modern restaurant I dined at last year?" "Hooray!" Fatty cried jubilantly "It's not a mirage rising above the smoke, cars, and exhaust fumes—it is Johnsen's Blue Top." Putting on her brake and throwing in the clutch on her 1914 Ford she swirled to the right and pulled into Johnsen's Blue Top.

Fatty Eatmuch has now taken permanent residence in Highland because that way she can be near to her beloved Johnsen's Blue Top. Fatty is an expert on fine food and she can tell you that Johnsen's serves only the best and tastiest foods in town.

Through the theme of NEW FACES THE PROMISE OF YOUTH, the 1967 cockade red SHIELD strove to tell the story of the year. Increasing enrollment was the principle cause for the eight additional pages in this year's SHIELD. Expansion was also seen in the SHIELD'S sales total.

Lending advice and encouragement in the production of this year's SHIELD was Mr. Ed Hackleman, area sales representative for the American Yearbook Company of Hannibal, Missouri.

Mr. Jack Bundy of S. K. Smith Company, Chicago, Illinois, counseled seniors Sandy Budzinski and Frida Nelson in the creation of this year's cover. Cockade red and a heavy black rub were incorporated to mold the simple yet elegant cover of the eighth volume of the SHIELD. Another innovation seen in this year's SHIELD was the use of cord grain leather for the cover.

Not only were firsts made in the sales department and the cover, but also in the division pages. A unique special effect called "direct line" was used to give the striking division pages even another dimension. Walinger Studios of Chicago, Illinois, photographed the majority of the activity, organization, and group pictures. Likewise, they were responsible for the senior portraits. Interstate Studios of Indianapolis, Indiana, photographed the underclassmen. Ward Cunningham, John Thompson, Jerry Dijak, and Bill Rezny, the student photographers, were diligent perfectionists whose toils resulted in a number of the exciting action and sport shots.

LOOK and LIFE styles were utilized to enhance the three column layout, and body copy was cast in 10 point Times Roman, the headlines in 24 point Lydian, and the captions in 8 point Times Roman Italic.

They were finally here. After months of hard work and frenzied activity, the 1967 SHIELDS had arrived in their sturdy cartons. Those boxes, however, contained more than just yearbooks. They contained the talent, skill, frustration, and self-sacrifice of every staff member who helped to produce the 1967 SHIELD.

The arrival of those same boxes signified the culmination of a year filled with picture cropping, copy fitting, and layout construction for the editors and myself.

For every editor-in-chief, their yearbook is a special one. I, too, feel that the 1967 SHIELD is special, but it is not "my book." Instead, it belongs to the students of Highland High and the SHIELD's staff members.

I want to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation and deepest thanks to the dedicated editors of the SHIELD and our advisor, Mr. Richard Johns, for the tremendous determination, help and loyalty they have given me in the production of the 1967 SHIELD.
